ORGAN RECITAL SERIES

2023 / 2024

Christopher Cipkin (Biography)

Christopher Cipkin began his musical career as a boy chorister of Leeds Parish Church, now Leeds Minster, under the direction of Dr. Simon Lindley, and he later held organ scholarships at the University of Keele and Newcastle Cathedral during further studies. His career as an academic librarian led him to work at the University of Reading, which included five years serving as music librarian. He was also organist to the University, and held posts at Wesley Methodist Church and Reading Minster. He is currently Director of Library at Royal Holloway, University of London and organist to St Paul's Church, Wokingham. Christopher has studied under several eminent British organists, including Michael Harris, James Lancelot, and Timothy Byram-Wigfield; he has also studied choral conducting with leading Dutch director, JanJoost van Elberg. He holds an MA in Musicology from the University of Reading, as well as the Associate diploma of the Royal College of Organists.

Admission

The organ recital series is being given in aid of St Paul's Church Restoration Fund and there will be a retiring collection at the end of each event or you can donate online by scanning the QR (right).
